WILLETT'S SAILORS COL. HEPBURN IS ALL LANDSMEN DONE WITH OFFICE

Fooing Suey's Crew Of His Townsman Greet Prairie Schooner Him At His Old Stripe Home

NEW YORK, Sept. 7. — The Fooing Suey, an American steel bark, deep with a sugar cargo from the Hawaiian Islands, is at anchor off Stapleton, and when the Owllet, the Herald dispatch boat, went alongside yesterday the last of the "dry land" crew, as the mate called them, was going over the rail, and Captain John Willett, the master, was "thanking his lucky stars" that the bark was here safe and sound.

"It was the sugar season in the islands when we left," said the mate, who acted as spokesman, "and there wasn't many who wanted to go deep watering at $25 a month when they could get $45 coasting. But at last the captain got ten foremast hands together, and we started 133 days ago. Say, I have seen sailors and sailors in the forty years that I have been going to sea, but these were the worst."

"There was not one who had ever been on the water except on the steamship that took them from San Francisco to the islands. One hauled from Kalamazoo, Mich., another from Helena, Mont., and there were more from Kansas, Indiana and nearly every state that hasn't a water front. They may have been sailors on prairie schooners, but never on the vasty deep."

"Captain John couldn't take any chances with them fellows in shortening sail, and so we have been on the voyage than we ought to have been. We were afraid all of the time that some of them would fall overboard and we are mighty glad to get rid of them. There was a saving grace, though — every one of them were Americans, and I guess old Father Neptune spared our sails and spars for that reason."

Kept like a yacht on her decks, the Fooing Suey is one of the China ships built for the Far East trade in 1888 at the Napier Yards in Glasgow. In her cabin there is a gold plate which tells that Queen Victoria pressed the button that set the anchoring ways in motion, and Captain Willett is very proud of it.

The bark is owned by Charles Brewer & Co. of Boston, and when the Hawaiian Islands came under American rule the bark was admitted to American registry.

MORE CITIZEN LABOR

Manager Ross of Honolulu plantation states that it is an error to assume that the larger portion of the strikebreakers going to his plantation each day from town, only thirty are Chinese. The others are Hawaiian, Portuguese, and what is included in the general term "citizen labor."
